

How to Search for Mode of Instruction using Class Search

When using class search in Navigator, under Additional Search Criteria, select an option in the Mode of Instruction drop down menu.

There are several modes of instruction listed, but the ones to search on are:

In Person: These classes meet face-to-face. All instruction occurs in a designated campus location (classroom) during regularly scheduled predetermined days and times (synchronous) for which instructor and students are physically present throughout; will require detailed health and safety protocols for engagement among faculty and students.

Hybrid Asynchronous: Student learning occurs both in scheduled in-person class meetings during specific published times and locations, and in asynchronous online class interactions. Typically, hybrid asynchronous classes will meet for fewer hours in person than standard in person classes, with more out of class work required.

Hybrid Synchronous: Student learning occurs both in scheduled in-person class meetings during specific published times and locations, and in synchronous online class meetings during specific published times. Typically, hybrid synchronous classes will meet for fewer hours in person than standard in person classes, but will have required online class meetings.

Asynchronous Online: Student learning occurs exclusively online, asynchronously; no convenings of the entire class; student engagement with the faculty member occurs as requested via a digital platform. There will be no prescheduled meeting times either online or in-person.

Blended Modality: Student learning occurs primarily online, asynchronously, but with pre-scheduled synchronous in-virtual convenings of the entire class (e.g. via ZOOM).

Synchronous Online: Student learning occurs exclusively online, during regularly scheduled predetermined days and times, for which instructor and students are virtually present throughout (e.g. via ZOOM).

Special instructions relevant to your class can be found in the class notes prior to the beginning of the semester. Please check your schedule and any notes right before the beginning of the semester.
